Brett Sensitivity

The Brett Sensitivity testing process is designed to train winery personnel to recognize a Brettanomyces infection and its resulting off-aromas. Each 45 minute testing session is self-guided and designed to individually test and train the participants. Blind samples are used in order to familiarize participants with Brettanomyces and the resulting chemical compounds in various red wine varietals. The goal is to come away with increased training on how to recognize Brett in red wines.
